

M. Amy Carlin to Speak at Northeastern University School of Law’s “Survive and Thrive in a Law Firm Setting” Program

Morgan, Brown & Joy attorney M. Amy Carlin will speak at Northeastern University School of Law’s (NUSL) “Survive and Thrive in a Law Firm Setting” program, March 20 in Boston, MA. This annual NUSL event provides law students with an opportunity to gain knowledge and perspective from experienced attorneys about how to thrive and survive as young associates in a law firm setting.

Carlin represents clients in a wide range of employment-related matters, including discrimination and retaliation claims, wage and other state and federal statutory actions and common law employment torts. She conducts sexual harassment and discrimination prevention training for employees, as well as trainings in best management practices and other employment topics.
